Brightwood Matinee Opens Local Season.

EVENTS WELL CONTESTED

Vight Injured in Free-for-All-James Lightning Won 2:30 Pace-Albert H. Captured Final.

Clear, pleasant weather ushered in the | to 3. local trotting season at Brightwood track yesterday afternoon. Excellent sport kept the fair-sized crowd which attended in good spirits until the last "Father of Baseball," and Commission-heat of the day was decided.

Only three of the four events carded were run off because of an accident in third race, a free-for-all event. The race drew out only two entries-Henry

Belle Mack, in four heats. She nosed out Count Robert on the post in the first, but broke in the second heat and finished behind Count Robert and Al wilder. In the two succeeding heats, however, she had things pretty much her own way. Count Robert was never won by an Annapolis horse, James Lightning, driven by Tom Cannon, the well-known local trainer of trotters. Lightning, driven by Tom Cannon, the well-known local trainer of trotters. The local horses pitted against him were trailing in each of the three heats. He so far outclassed his competitors that all interest was lost as far as the winner was concerned, and the fight for second place between Howard Russell, Cynrois and Captain Marion claimed the attention of the spectators, and when the last heat had been run, each had a second, a third, and a fourth to his credit, and money was divided among the three.

Albert H. won the final event, a named race, from Roy Hal, Easy Mark, and Yowell Maid, just as easily as James Lightning distanced his field.

The condition of the horses was somewhat backward, and because of this fact, half-mile heats were the order of the day. John R. Kelly, president of the Brightwood Driving and Riding Association, was the starter, and the races were run off with much more dispatch than in previous years, when the delay between heats was both long and tiresome.

eighteen safeties and dented the home disk at will.

While Columbian had only four errors charged up against it, many were the errors of omission and judgment. The Columbian outfielders virtually presented their opponents with several runs by careless returning of the ball. They would throw to the plate when there was no earthly opportunity of catching the runner unless he dropped dead before he reached the home ottoman.

For the locals the fielding of Orison was the feature. He accepted ten of eleven chances at short, and was also there with the stick, bagging a pair of singles.

He misjudged the ball, ran too far in, then had to back out. The ball was well on his right side, and giving a wild leap into the air with his body at an angle of about 45 degrees, he stuck out his paws and took a chance.

Took Chance and Won.

He won. The ball landed in the glove with a sickening thud, and was too disgusted to drop out. A quick relay to McCormick in an effort to catch Mc-Guire off second failed, but Powell was nabbed off first, and one of the quickest doubles in the history of Washington baseball had been completed.

Touching on features we come next to the home run of the young man Drill. It appeared in the seventh inning, and was A No. 1 on the revised list of homers. It was one of those low, hard drives whose special mission in life is to kill anybody that gets in their way.

Down between center and left it went, and reached the fence before it stopped.

Fultz Almost as Good.

In the sixth inning Fultz made a Thoney, and aroused the crowd to the highest pitch of enthusiasm.

About the game itself—inability to hit caused all the trouble. Seven safeties were made, but with the exception of Drill not a man delivered the goods at the critical moment. In three of the the critical moment. In three of the innings the Senators opened with a hit. In not one of them did a second hit come, and the runners perished. Such sticking as that counteracts all the good work in fielding, and makes the heart of the fan sick and sore.

No matter what the cost in the field, something should be done at once to get a few batters on the team, for at the present rate, with all the strong Eastern teams coming this way, Washingon seems likely not to win a game for

EMERSONS WIN THEIR FIRST VICTORY

Henry Talbott, Dr. Walter S. Harban, president of the District Association; Dr. T. S. Palmer, of the Biological Bureau of the Agricultural Department, held a meeting in Harpers Ferry on Saturday and determined upon a line of action.

Immediately after the meeting, Mr. Braedy, manager of several pulp and paper mill companies in that vicinity, was called before the committee and assured its members that no more refuse matter from his mills would be emptied into the waters of the Potomac.

Will come to Washington. He would fill up a blg hole at first, as Jake Stahington, and the club owners do not heesitate to say so.

Lefty Davis is said to have received the message sent him to report immediately, and is now on his way to this city from Columbus, Ohio.

In view of the tangled condition of affairs here when the new owners took hold of the club at such a late date, it is thought that President Johnson will resclind the order limiting the number of players on each team to fifteen in the case of Washington, so as to give the owners a thorough opportunity to separate the chaff from the wheat. Emerson Institute scored its first vic ment Lot. Many errors were made by each team because of the roughness of the grounds. The heavy hitting of C. Orme, of the Emersons, was the most noteworthy feature of the game.
